

The Narragansett Bay Commission
Sponsors a Symposium

A Day on the Upper Bay

Current Monitoring, Research, Source Reduction Progress & Future Challenges

Thursday, June 16, 2011
8:00 am – 5:00 pm

Johnson & Wales University: Culinary Archives & Museum
315 Harborside Blvd
Providence, RI

The Narragansett Bay Commission (NBC) is sponsoring a day long workshop to provide an opportunity to discuss the latest water quality data collected and research conducted in Narragansett Bay. We hope to bring together Narragansett Bay's water quality experts, regulators and other stakeholders to discuss their most recent findings, source reduction successes and future monitoring and research needs. We are also bringing in the regulators from Rhode Island and Massachusetts to get the states' regulatory perspectives. This workshop will be a great opportunity for all stakeholders, scientists and regulators to exchange the latest information and improvements in the Upper Bay, and discuss our future path toward achieving and surpassing water quality standards. We sincerely hope that you will embrace the opportunity to attend this free workshop.

If you are able to attend, please RSVP to the NBC by contacting Ms. Kimberly Kirwan at 401-461-8848 x391 or kimberly.kirwan@narrabay.com by June 10, 2011, so that proper arrangements can be made.

